DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-5, 7, 9, and 12-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Giuliani et al. in view of Roberts (U.S. 5,987,688). Giuliani discloses a driver assembly (24), a vibrating stimulator assembly (14) causing random movement and having a resonant frequency similar to the drive frequency (col. 4, line 54), the resonant frequency increasing under load (col. 9, line 38), base portion (15), and fingers (18). Giuliani shows a 150-400 Hz range, but does not include the range from 40-149 Hz. Such a limitation is considered a matter of obvious design choice based on user preference and within the knowledge of the skilled artisan to suit various applications. Giuliani lacks stimulators as claimed by the applicant. Roberts discloses an analogous device including soft, flexible, elastomeric stimulators (20) having rounded tops (see fig. 6 and 7), and cross sectional diameter in the range of 0.06 to 0.25 inches (col. 4, lines 24-26) and a shore A hardness preferably ranging from 35-55 (col. 4, lines 29-30). The specific length of the elastomeric stimulators are not disclosed, however, the claimed range is a matter of simple design choice encompassing the range of standard bristles on a tooth brush. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to provide the elastomeric stimulators of Roberts with the vibrating toothbrush of Giuliani in order to allow a user to massage their gums while brushing their teeth. Furthermore regarding limitations drawn towards intended use, the modified Giuliani device has taught the claimed structural limitations, therefore, the intended use can be performed with the cited art.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 1-5, 7, 9 and 12-14 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. Additionally applicant has arguments drawn towards the intended use of the device citing that applicant's device is not meant to brush the teeth, however this argument is not taken well. The intended use of prior art versus the claimed invention does not result in structural differences. Giuliani and Roberts have disclosed all the claimed structural limitations.
